Wages and Hours of Labour in Canada, 1901-1920

Tables showing changes in Rates of Wages and Hours of Labour in various classes of employment

THE present bulletin comprises tables of rates of wages and hours of labour of various classes of employment in Canada. These tables have been compiled in the Department of Labour from returns received from various sources, and are published in the belief that the facts presented will be of interest and service to employers and workers, and to the public in general. The main object of the tables is to indicate the changes in wage rates which have occurred over the period under review. The occupations listed in the bulletin do not cover the entire field of industry, but the particular trades selected are typical of a sufficiently wide range of employment to make their publication of value.

The tables numbered I to V, which comprise the main part of this bulletin, show the rates of wages and the hours of labour in thirteen cities of Canada for a number of occupations, commencing with the year 1901 and ending with the year 1920. As far as possible the rates quoted for each year are those in effect during September, which in general reflect conditions up to the end of the year, although, of course, in some cases, changes would occur which would not be indicated.

Table I deals with seven building trades: viz., Bricklayers, Carpenters, Electrical Workers, Painters, Plumbers, Stonecutters and Builders' Labourers, selected as indicating the movements in wages and hours in the building industry during the period under review. The information for this table was obtained by Departmental officers and correspondents, and from copies of signed agreements and returns from trade union officials and employers.

Table II contains the figures for five metal trades: Blacksmiths, Boilermakers, Iron Moulders, Machinists and Sheet Metal Workers, selected as representative of this group of trades employed in industrial establishments Statistics as to rates for railway shop employees are not included. The sources of information are similar to those used for the building trades. In many cases wide ranges in the rates were found in the metal trades, and in such instances, keeping in mind that the main object of the table was to show the movements in wages and hours, the record of rates was selected which showed most continuity.

In Table III two classes have been taken to represent the printing trades: namely, Newspaper Hand Compositors on day work, and Job Office Cylinder Pressmen. All of the sources mentioned above have been used in this table, but it is largely based on copies of signed agreements and returns from trade union officials. In some cases the wages fixed by agreement have been supplemented by a bonus, and the amount of the bonus is included in the figures listed.

Table IV contains figures for Street Railway Conductors and Motormen, classes which comprise a very large majority of street railway employees. The rates paid vary in nearly all instances according to the term of service, but the maximum rates have been listed, as these usually affect the largest number of men.

Table V gives statistics for Freight Conductors, Freight Brakemen, Freight Locomotive Engineers, Freight Locomotive Firemen, Telegraphers and Sectionmen, as representative of steam railway operating employees. For the first four of these classes the figures show the rates per mile or the minimum daily rates, as explained in the footnote. The figures for this group are those of one of the large Canadian railways, and are obtained from the schedules of rates, etc.

In addition to these statements, a Supplementary Table is given for the purpose of illustrating by samples the movements of rates of wages and hours of labour from 1911 to 1920 in various branches of factory employment and in the lumbering industry. Each sample shows the rates paid by some particular employer from year to year.

The first set of samples, VI (a), is for common labour in various classes of factories. The locality is given in each instance, but the return being confidential, the nature of the industry is omitted.

The second set, VI (b), comprises sample rates for miscellaneous factory trades. The tables show the trade and the industry concerned and the province in which the factory is situated.

The samples in the third set are for the lumbering industry, and exemplify the trend of rates for one class of workers in the bush and three classes in the sawmill.

Index Numbers of Wage Rates

In order to show the general trend of the movement in wages in Tables I to V, index numbers have been computed. For each series of rates, that is, for each trade or occupation in each locality, index numbers have been calculated both from the hourly rates and from the weekly rates, and these index numbers have been averaged by groups for all the localities, thus indicating the percentage of change in weekly rates and in hourly rates for each group. The year 1913 was taken as the base year, that is, the rate for 1913 in each case was taken as 100, so that the index numbers show the percentage of change prior to and since that date. An average was also made for all of the series in these tables, in order to indicate the general trend in wages in such trades as a whole. In making the average index numbers the simple arithmetical averages were taken.

Similarly index numbers have been calculated for the three sets of sample rates in the supplementary tables.
